I want to be a pharmacist because pharmacists are one of the most accessible health care professionals to patients. I want to be able to use my extensive knowledge of medications to help optimize the care and regimens of my patients. Upon graduating with my Doctor of Pharmacy Degree, I aspire to pursue a pharmacy residency in a health system because I enjoy the challenge and variety that working in a hospital provides. I aspire to be a direct part of the health care team working collaboratively with the physicians and other team members to optimize each patient's care.

Being a pharmacist means providing quality patient care to everyone who steps into the pharmacy, which includes exceptional guidance and counseling. Upon completion of pharmacy school, my primary goal is to use my degree to help others by utilizing my knowledge and experience to better address the health of individuals in my community.

I am fortunate to live and learn in an extremely diverse area that requires culturally competent professionals who can address the needs of the patient, while promoting a sense of understanding and compassion.
